

Change of name

for a CHILD born or adopted overseas

What the law says

You can change your child's first name(s) once with us between the ages of 1 and 18. You can change your child's family name once every 12 months (if they live here).

To change your child's name:

- your child's first name(s) must not have been changed with us before
- your child's family name must not have been changed in the past 12 months
- both parents on your child's birth certificate must consent to changing the name
- if your child is 12 to 17, they must also consent to changing their name
- the new name(s) must not be a prohibited name
 - obscene or offensive
 - too long or unpronounceable
 - not in public interest
 - a statement (e.g. Save Mother Earth) or political slogan
 - includes an official title or rank (e.g. Duchess, Sergeant)
 - includes symbols without phonetic significance (e.g. bracket (), at symbol @)
- your child lives in Queensland (and has for 12 months)
- you must give a detailed reason for your child's name change.

Proof of ID

If original documents are not in English, please have them translated into English by an accredited translator and provide a certified copy of the original document with the original translation.

To change your child's name with us, you need to pay the fee (if you did not pay online) and bring original documents (no photocopies) for us to see at your appointment:

- 3 forms of current proof of ID for both parents
- a copy of your child's birth or adoption (you must try to get one)—if you can't get one, provide a statutory declaration and we may be able to accept at least one of the following (not in every situation)
 - their Australian visa
 - a travel document
 - passport issued by their country of birth plus a letter from the consulate confirming your child's details.
- linking evidence if your current name(s) (including your child) are different to the names on your child's birth certificate, such as
 - marriage certificate
 - family deed poll document
 - birth certificate
 - change of name document.
- evidence that your child has lived in Queensland for the past 12 months, such as a letter written on letterhead, that is dated and signed by either their
 - day care
 - school
 - doctor
 - employer.

The letter should state how long your child has lived in Queensland and how long the person or organisation has known your child.
