TOP 5 SCAMS TO AVOID WHILE TRAVELING!!

1: Broken Taxi Meter
Cab drivers near airports or train stations are known to pull this scam, but it can happen anywhere. When you get into a taxi and start to drive, the driver will inform you that the meter is broken and charge you a ridiculous price (to the tune of 100s of dollars if you're not careful).

2: Overbooked Or Closed Hotel
Again, this common travel scam happens largely with cab drivers. While en route to your hotel, the driver will tell you your hotel is either closed or overbooked and then take you to a more expensive hotel where the driver receives a nice fat commission.

3: Free Bracelets Or Rosemary
This scam tends to prey on female travelers. A friendly man or woman will approach to chat, then place a "free" friendship bracelet on your wrist. Or hand you a sprig of Rosemary for good luck. Once you have it, they will demand money. When you refuse, they will begin to cause a scene.

Spills On Your Clothing
Common in Europe, a traveler will be walking down the street and feel something plop on their shoulder – often times bird poop or a fast-food condiment. Then, a friendly stranger approaches and begins to wipe off the offending mess while plucking your wallet from your pocket or purse.

Fake Police Officers
The fake police officer scam is a popular one in many large cities. Most often, a person will approach a tourist and offer illicit items, like drugs. While conversing one or two other people will approach, appearing to be police officers and flashing "badges." They will then insist the unknowing traveler hand over their passport and wallet. However, they are not police officers.
